

The figure consists of a 6x10 grid of 60 small network diagrams, each representing a different molecular structure. The nodes are blue dots and the edges are thin black lines. The structures vary significantly in complexity and size. Some are compact and roughly circular, while others are more sprawling and irregular. The overall pattern forms a large, sparse hexagonal lattice across the entire grid.